

The committee on resolutions, was composed as follows : Messrs. Thomas Settle, B. S. Hedrick (of Washington City), David M. Carter, R. P. Dick, Dr. E. Grissom, L. Harris, Alfred Dockery, C. R. Thomas, Joseph W. Holden, and John B. Odors (whites), and Messrs. James Bowman, S. Leary, J. W. Hood, G. W. Brodie, J. Cawthorn, E. Miller, J. R. Caswell, H. Lockett, W. R. Smith and H. Unthank (colored.) The meeting adjourned to meet

"Black spirits and white,
Red Spirits and gray;
Mingle, mingle, mingle,
That that mingle may."

Fertilizers.

We desire to call attention to the valuable suggestions contained in a letter upon this subject published in another place. Our correspondent is an educated and practical chemist, and is thoroughly versed in the matters of which he writes.

In connection with the suggestion of our correspondent, we are glad to be able to state that the manufacture of Fertilizers will be begun near this City at an early day, a company having purchased "Hilpolitic, to this canker worm gnawing at the root of our prosperity and happiness. And now, the general stagnation of business, the towns and villages, as seen by our leading men to induce these people to go in the country and work upon the farms, and let our young men of responsibility, who are out of employment in towns and villages, in the same way, see too many of them loafing about bar rooms, hotels, and other public places sighing in vain for some soft, easy, shady place in town. They are contracting habits that will ruin them, and their safety is to be found in the country. Let them pick up the hoe, the hoe, the axe, and learn that it is honorable and manly to thus dignify labor; the most refined, the most intelligent, the educated and the high-minded throughout this Southern land, are now and in the future to be found in the country, in the products and prosperity of the South. Let a proper change be wrought in this respect—let us have fewer merchants and clerks and more farmers—fewer to engage in these light employments, and more to speed their way to the country, where they can grow, chew politics and all go to work with resolute hearts and untiring hands, and all will be well.

A CORN PLANTER.

March 26th, 1867.

Mayor Thomas, radical of St. Louis, has been nominated for re-election.

If we decide you, then turn to the North and see if you can find better friends there. I have no fears of the result; for with not only does humanity dictate kind treatment, honest dealing, just laws for the colored population, but self-interest demands from us the same course. A stronger prejudice has always existed at the North against your people than here, and it exists still. A curious instance of this prejudice came under my own observation some years ago in Philadelphia. Passing through that city, I had with me two servants for whom full fare was charged on the railroad.

The remains of Charles F. Browne have been temporarily placed in a vault at Kensal Green Cemetery, London, whence, in accordance with his desire, they will be conveyed to America. For nine days before his death he was quite insensible. By his will he leaves the bulk of his property to his mother, and his love for children is shown by an extraordinary number of legacies to persons of the tender age. The property bequeathed to his mother is after her death to revert in trust to Horace Greeley, to be applied for the foundation of an asylum for aged and deaaved printers.

snow fell at Indianapolis, Ind.

ered in Wirt county, West Virginia.